Lateral vision and firing ports for the commander/radio operator are on the right side. A chock to secure the stationary vehicle against moving off spontaneously is carried on the left side. Between its 1st and 2nd wheels, and the 3rd and 4th ones, the vehicle has rod footrests with handrails above them on the hull side, allowing the crew to climb onto the vehicle roof with two hatches for the assault group members.

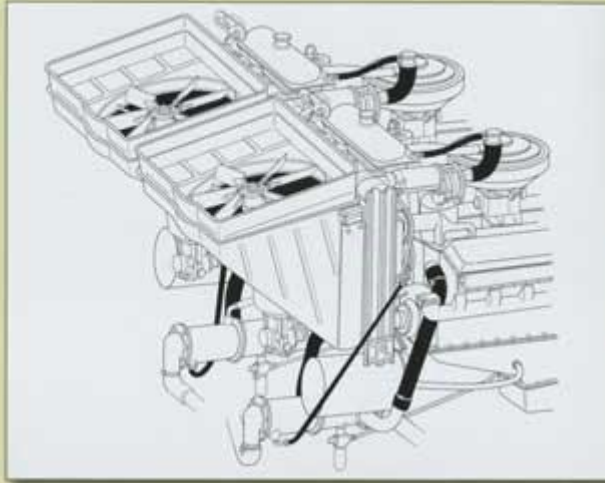

010 Hull Sides

In the front hull under the turret there are seats for all four crewmembers including the driver and commander. The backrests of the front (driver's and commander's) seats can be folded down if necessary.

028 Interior Details

Engine Compartment

The sketch left depicts the overall layout in the hull rear section. The fuel tanks (missing in the sketch) can be found under the angled bottom of the cooling system air ducts. Radiator screens and air duct angled bottoms are visible underneath the fan blades.
