ROYAL AIR FORCE PAINT SET

Standard camouflage colours of RAF planes during WW2

Hurricane Mk I, F/Lt Eric James Brindley Nicolson, 249 Squadron, Boscombe Down, 1940

Spitfire Vb, P/O Włodzimierz Miksa, 315 Squadron, Northolt, October 1941

RAF planes entered WW2 wearing a "Temperate Land Scheme" of Dark Green and Dark Earth (thus colloquially known as "Sand & Spinach" pattern) over Black and White bottom. After May 1940 undersides of all fighters (and later also fighter-bombers) were repainted to Sky "Type S". After the Battle of Britain, from September 1941 onwards, a scheme more appropriate for offensive patrols over continental Europe was introduced to Fighter Command aircraft - Dark Earth was replaced by Ocean Grey and Sky "Type S" with Medium Sea Grey.

P-51 Mustang Mk III, S/Ldr Eugeniusz "Dziubek" Horbaczewski, 315 Squadron, Brenzett, July 1944

Hawker Tempest Mk V, 3 Squadron, F/L Pierre Clostermann, Hopsten (Germany), April 1945
