RECENT US DESERT SCHEME (OIF, OEF)

HTK-C090

After relatively short period of using the complex MERDC camouflage, in mid-1980s a new 3-colour pattern was developed by NATO (as in the US this process was parallel to transition to Chemical Agent Resistant Coating paints - CARC - it is often referred to as "CARC scheme"). The new paint scheme was to be used by all NATO ground forces and consisted of a base green colour (FS34094) with brown (FS30051) and black (FS37030) disruptive shapes. Washable white paint was advised for temporary (partial or overall) pattern in winter environment. CARC Tan (FS33444) or more recently CARC Middle Stone (FS33531), both with strong fading tendency, have been used in desert conditions. Heavy-armor vehicles' interiors are painted gloss white, while most of APCs/IFVs still use light green shade (FS24553).

HTK-C016
Dark Green

FS34079 (MERDC Forest Green), overall colour of early M1 Abrams tanks. Used on part of M1 Abrams of USMC during ODS

HTK-C152
NATO Green

FS34094 (CARC Green), used in standard NATO 3-colour camouflage. Also overall colour of Stryker IFV family

HTK-C188
NATO Brown

FS30051 (CARC Brown), used in standard NATO 3-colour camouflage of majority of US Army and USMC AFVs

HTK-C125
NATO Black

FS37030 (CARC Black), used in standard NATO 3-colour camouflage of majority of US Army and USMC AFVs

HTK-C238
Desert Tan

FS33444 (CARC Tan), initial standard colour of US military vehicles in desert conditions (with strong fading tendency)

HTK-C090
Sand

FS33531 (CARC Middle Stone), recent (OIF, OEF) desert colour of US military vehicles. Also used for panel lighting over CARC Tan

HTK-C239
Seafoam Green

FS24553, standard colour of interiors of US modern APCs and IFVs (including M113, LVTP7, AAVP7, M2/M3, but not Stryker)

HTK-A153
Acrylic Temporary White

Washable (temporary) matt paint used to cover selected areas in improvised winter camouflage of US AFVs (over CARC scheme)

Dedicated acrylic white paint for temporary winter camo effect in "Therapy technique"
